

THE SOUTH

OVERALL WINNER:

The South. There you have it. New Englanders might try to lord their beautiful coastline, higher aggregate education and four distinct seasons over us, but ENVY has scientifically proven Southern superiority over those callous, fast-talking Yankee wimps. We totally eat better. The South has risen again!

THE SOUTH

SAM ADAMS VS. SHINER BOCK

Sam Adams

Pro: Smarmy booze dilettantes can feel more like beer connoisseurs by ordering a Sam Adams in the South, since they're served everywhere.

Con: No self-respecting Southern brewery would name their holiday ale "Old Fezziwig." That's like Lone Star creating a "Donder and Blitzen Bock." Embarrassing.

Shiner

Pro: Shiner has actually retained a lot of its microbrew mystique, despite its availability outside of Texas. And there's a damn ram on the label, which trumps the metrosexual vest and pageboy haircut of Mr. Adams on that wussy Yankee beer.

Con: A trip to the tailor to let your waist seams out is required after an evening partaking in the Bock. It's comparable to drinking a six-pack of beef stew.

THE SOUTH

CHOWDER VS. CHILI

Chowder

Pro: Aside from a "Fenway Frank," chowder is the only suitable comestible that should be eaten during that greatest of pastimes: a Red Sox game at Fenway Park.

Con: Chowder is ugly. In fact, chowder looks uncannily like a two-week-old bowl of Elmer's paste mixed liberally with otter vomit.

Chili

Pro: There's a certain manliness about eating a steaming bowl of chili, and chowder seems like the equivalent of a weak, kiddie meal by comparison. Like frying fois gras into "dunkable" strips and serving them with a side of "caviar and ranch dressing" dipping sauce.

Con: Chowder is highly unlikely to ever disrupt your intestinal lining and is rarely concocted by masochistic "chefs" who think capsaicin would make a wonderful toothpaste ingredient.

BAKER ST. DOZEN

13 Items Under $7
Served Daily 11am-2pm

SALADS

- Chopped Cobb
- Chicken, Grape & Toasted Almond
- Warm Bacon Spinach
- Classic Caesar

COMBOS

- Soup & Salad
- Soup & Sandwich
- Salad & Sandwich
- Soup & Baja Taco
- Salad & Baja Taco

ENTRÉES

- Fish & Chips
- Grilled Chicken Breast
- Grilled Salmon Filet
- Blackened Chicken Alfredo

Ft. Worth • Katy • Sugar Land
The Woodlands • Rice Village • Willowbrook

jointhepub.com